This is the major query as Mumbai is getting blessed with heavy rains in this monsoon season once again, and shifting in such a weather can harm the house plants. Because house plants are especial plants which don't need much of water to grow, they're delicate in nature and needs more care than the other plants or tress in the garden or forests. They require extra attention, less or limited sunlight sometimes, fresh air of course and limited water to have healthy and long life. So, if they got hurt during the monsoon then you might see them destroying in front Packers And Movers Mumbai to Bangalore of your eyes within a blink. That's why we suggest you to hire or follow professional guide to relocate or shuffle your house plants.

NOTE: the very first thing which is to be bothered – look for a separate and nice space for your house plants and shifting to a rental house. Make this point clear with them about keeping plants in your apartment. However, no one is going to abuse or stop you for this – instead they would love, but still make it clear from your side.

What you'll require to wrap your house plants

- A sturdy box to pack each pot or can even plan for tough plastic containers
- If having clay pot then make sure to transfer your plants into a plastic pot for better durability (later you can exchange again)
- Sterilized potting soil
- Newspaper or packing paper
- Bubble wraps
- Plastic bags
- Paper towels for covering the pots
- A sturdy box to pack each pot or can even plan for tough plastic containers
- If having clay pot then make sure to transfer your plants into a plastic pot for better durability (later you can exchange again)

NOTE: shift your plants from clay pot – to – plastic pots or containers a few weeks before so that they can settle down and plant them with fresh, sterile soil. Also keep in mind to water them well 2-3 days before the moving date so that soil is moist [not be too wet] so, that they can go without a water for 7-9 days of moving {if the move takes}. Also make this point into your crucial list – the roots should stay damp during the relocation.

How to pack a plant with a pot?

- The very first thing you need to do is – place a plastic bag at the bottom of the pot and tie it properly to keep the soil contained.
- Test your box well before you put your plant, check is it strong enough to take the weight of your plant. Also, for extra protection tape the bottom of the box to ensure the full safety.
- Once you put the plant into box, fill the empty space with newspaper so that the plant can breathe and also it has safety from #moving or shaking inside the box during the transit. Because shaking or waving of a plant during the shipment can cause huge damage to leaf's, flowers and even the whole plant.

- Do not forget to label your box with “Live Plant”. So, the mover can understand and take extra precaution for this.
- Since you’ll not be #moving in the moving truck along with your goods so its recommended to ask your mover to keep an eye on your plant and make them drink water in between if felt that the soil is getting dry.
