The impact of obstructive sleep apnoea (OSA) on survival in patients with first-time acute myocardial infarction (AMI) has not been studied. We studied 79 consecutive patients with first-time AMI (64 men, mean age 57 years) treated for their AMI between 1992 and 1995. All patients were examined for OSA by a questionnaire and ambulatory polygraphy. Follow-up continued for 36 months or until death. The primary end-point was sudden death. During the follow-up period, 23 (29%) patients died suddenly and the overall mortality was 31%. In a multivariate Cox analysis, OSA was the only independent factor associated with sudden death (OR 4.4, 95% CI 1.6-12.2, p = 0.004). Patients with first-time AMI and OSA have a higher risk of sudden death compared to those without OSA.K.T.K. IS VERY RESPONSIBLE. There is a bit of history on this build. I was in a LARP a year ago and I was looking for a little gauntlet. I didn't have much cash and needed a cheap one. I found one, a classic gauntlet that I'll re-use for this project and it worked great. It has very thin and breakable plastic. I found out from a friend how to drill and punch it. So I could double up the drill bit and punch it. Here is the results: Next is the glove and helmet. The helmet is a good safety measure because I don't want to hurt myself (or anyone) when I work on my build. The glove can be attached to the gauntlet by drilling a hole and threading the plastic. I added a separate tie strap to secure it. The plastic has a good grip on the back side and the inside of the palm and thumb side. Next is the armor. It is made from 3mm gasket and a 2mm thick plywood board. The gasket and plywood board were cut to fit the size of my gauntlet. The gasket was glued to the plywood 2d92ce491b
