Cisplatin is a key drug in the treatment of non-small cell lung cancer (NSCLC). Unfortunately, cisplatin resistance is often observed in patients with NSCLC. This study investigated the role of oncogene BANCR and tumor suppressor gene RETREG in cisplatin resistance of human NSCLC cells. We used quantitative real-time polymerase chain reaction (qRT-PCR), western blotting, cell viability assay and flow cytometry to detect the expression levels of BANCR and RETREG in cisplatin-resistant (A549/DDP) and parental (A549) cells. The effects of knockdown of BANCR and RETREG on the cisplatin resistance of A549/DDP cells were also explored. The expression levels of BANCR and RETREG in A549/DDP cells were increased significantly compared with the parental cells. The expression levels of BANCR and RETREG in A549/DDP cells could be effectively inhibited by siRNA, which could increase the sensitivity of A549/DDP cells to cisplatin. These findings suggest that BANCR and RETREG contribute to cisplatin resistance of human NSCLC cells.Disease activity in systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) is strongly linked with the systemic inflammatory response.
