The Pictographic Script In the journals of people who explore their dreams and visions, there appear fragments of information about a "Pictographic Script." A dreamer reported one night in 1953 that he "seems to be interested in a system of thinking which was utilized in the past, and which bears some resemblance to the system of writing which has been in use for a short time. The thought that I had in my mind when I read the writings of a British archaeologist led me to the idea that the script had been used originally as a method of writing, and later became a pictographic system, and perhaps a system which may be used to communicate. For I feel that there is a connection, and that both the script and the pictographic system were really a method of thought and communication." In another dream, a woman who had been greatly interested in the "pictographic script" said this of it: "There are other writings associated with the ancient system of pictography and these are contained in the record. Let us see them and we will learn what the Ancients were trying to tell us." There is another report in a journal of a dreamer, and this dreamer mentioned the "pictographic script" before the ancient "writing system" in a discussion of some other matter. It was not until some time later that I became familiar with the concept of the "Pictographic Script," for I saw in a book published by the U.S. Government Printing Office, "The Pictographic Script," an example of the "Culture Phonetic" or "pictographic" script. (It is the pictograph "Great Spirit," and the printing on the paper is a reproduction of this picture.) The printing of this picture appeared to be a few years before the dream of the first report. Perhaps that dream of the dreamer in 1953 may have come from another dream, for I had dreamed about the script before reading this reference to it. There are also many published books which deal with this subject, but I found a dissertation by Edwin James Leslie, Doctor of Philosophy, on "The ancient Near East as represented in the 'Pictographic Script' ", submitted to the University of London, in 1931, which gave an excellent description of that "script." What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.4.2)?

Who invited you to the party? When I say it, it's all about you. There's not a reason you would want to do it. And if you do it, you don't want me. But you'll always be the one for me. Swim with me. We only got this far because you said you'd be here. And who says you are the only one who can make me believe in love? But for now, you only get you. Where did you go? Look around, I'm not going anywhere. It's your night. I said it's your night. I wouldn't like if you ruin it. But if you do, I'll let it be. And who says you are the only one who can make me believe in love? Let it be. I said I'll let it be. I don't believe in love. I said I don't believe in love. Sidenote: For anyone interested in knowing, this poem was inspired by a relationship I had. I wrote this at the time, and it was actually one of the more difficult poems I'd ever written. One of my friends had told me I was a terrible writer at the time, and that's partially how I was trying to get to grips with my creative writing. This poem was written when I was 13 years old.
