Overview Photoshop is a raster graphics editor, meaning that it stores images in a format that is based on a matrix of dots called pixels. In comparison, vector graphics editors such as Illustrator have stored images in a form of vectors (straight lines, curves, and arcs) and have their own drawing system. There are two types of pixels in Photoshop: color pixels and gray-tone pixels. Color pixels are used for full-color raster images. Gray-tone pixels are used for grayscale images. Photoshop provides basic editing tools for manipulating individual pixels. This means that if the pixels have been reduced to a single color, for example, it's possible to manipulate individual pixels to blend them into one another. These tools include erasing, cloning, healing, cropping, masking, adjusting filters, and much more. Additional tools are available for working with photographic images, including levels, curves, paints, masking, brushes, and textures. Photoshop supports multiple levels of image manipulation. It has powerful editing capabilities, such as a color correction toolbox that enables users to quickly change the appearance of an image. It's possible to choose from a wide variety of presets that allow users to quickly change the colors and other attributes of an image. It also provides powerful cropping tools, which allow users to take an image and crop it to fit a specific shape. Photoshop also includes basic image-editing tools. These tools enable users to "correct" colors, remove unwanted areas, and crop images. It includes an effects and filters toolbox that allows users to apply special effects, filters, and work with layers, among other image-editing features. Photoshop 7 had a very simple user interface, which relied more heavily on dialog boxes than windows. In Photoshop CS, the basic interface was redesigned to a tabbed interface, similar to those used by Microsoft's Internet Explorer and Windows. Photoshop 8 extended the basic capabilities of earlier versions of Photoshop. It added powerful tools for working with layers and masks. It also added powerful anti-aliasing and dithering tools. Photoshop 9 introduced several major advances. It integrated Adobe Camera Raw (ACR) into the Photoshop editing process. ACR combines tools that work with RAW formats, like noise reduction and color adjustment. Photoshop 9 also added motion tools and retouching tools, such as hair removal and skin smoothing. Photoshop's most powerful feature is its Cohannesburg - PotashCorp has landed a $273m pre-completion payment for its project on the Roodepoort - Johannesburg International Freeway, with completion of the asset expected in the first quarter of 2020. The coal mine giant announced on Thursday that its joint venture with Swedish partner Viterra, Azul Resources, had secured financing from a consortium led by Anglo American, Eastman Chemical, India's Essar Metals, Indika Holdings and Tenneco, with support from the South African government. The miner said that the cash will be used to finance an offset package, including mine reclamation, alternative green-gas power generation and other remediation efforts. "We are proud to be given this significant funding that will go towards reclamation of the site, using sustainably sourced green-gas. "Combined with the large amount of red emission offsets the project will generate, it is in line with all our South African emissions targets," said PotashCorp's regional head for Africa, Peter Wall. The project, in the Mpumalanga province, was the largest independent project in Africa to have been granted an offset status, the company said. PotashCorp shares were up 13.5% to close at R3.95 in Thursday trading. In a joint venture with Indika Holdings, PotashCorp is developing a 540km² coal mine near Roodepoort in Mpumalanga Province. It is scheduled to begin production in 2021. The company announced in July that it had delivered a 13.6% stake in the project, now called Eraden, to a consortium led by Itochu. With global prices of the commodity in the negative, PotashCorp said its shareholders had collectively committed to an equity injection of R2.1bn. Itochu said at the time that there was no extension of the loan as a result. The company said in a statement that the payment would go towards the reclamation of a 38.9ha land parcel - a medium-sized area - at Eraden and Errock in Mpumalanga. The reclamation will include the decontamination of soils and engineering infrastructure. Once complete, the mine will yield 17.9m tonnes of coking coal per annum at a fuel-to-energy ratio of 5.24.
