Endogenous IL-4 and IFN-gamma enhance the development of B cell abnormalities in Sjögren's syndrome. Sjögren's syndrome (SS) is a chronic autoimmune disease, characterized by B cell and T cell abnormalities. Interleukin (IL)-4 and IFN-gamma are known to be important factors in the pathogenesis of SS. In this study, we examined the effect of the autoantigen, SS-B, on the production of IL-4 and IFN-gamma by mononuclear cells from patients with SS. Anti-SS-B (anti-La) antibodies were used as the source of SS-B antigens to stimulate lymphocytes from SS patients and healthy individuals. The SS-B antigens induced the production of IL-4 by mononuclear cells from patients with SS, with a significant increase compared with antigen alone. Anti-SS-B antibodies also enhanced the production of IFN-gamma by mononuclear cells from patients with SS. This finding was associated with a higher production of anti-SS-B antibodies in patients with SS, but was not correlated with serum levels of rheumatoid factor. These results suggest that endogenous IL-4 and IFN-gamma can enhance B cell abnormalities in SS.Study of the carcinogenicity of diethylnitrosamine in hairless mice: a new biological approach to study the effects of prolonged chemical exposure. An attempt was made to develop a new biological approach to evaluate the carcinogenic potency of xenobiotics. Diethylnitrosamine (DEN) was shown to induce type-O adenocarcinomas in strain A/Jax male hairless mice. The induction of benign tumours in subcutaneous tissue was observed by administration of other chemical carcinogens (e.g. 7,12-dimethylbenz[a]anthracene (DMBA)), or combined administration of DEN and carrageenan. A characteristic of the mammary tumours induced by DEN was their high recurrence rate. Carcinogen-carrier interactions of this type can be used to identify and study the mechanisms and site(s) of carcinogenesis of various xenobiotics, the results of which can be useful in the prevention and/or control of cancer incidence in humans.Posts navigation Archives for May 2013 I honestly don't know how many of you read The Freelance Switch Blog,
