The aim of this post is to explain the difference between Photoshop Elements and Photoshop. PSD vs PSB image file? This is probably the most confused question many people ask when they need to edit or convert an image. There are PSD and PSB file formats. Photoshop Elements only opens PSD files and Photoshop only opens PSB files. There is no need to convert a PSD to PSB or vice versa. How do you know what file format is used in an image? Click here for a guide. Photoshop Photoshop is a commercial graphics software. It is developed by Adobe and designed specifically for image editing and manipulation. If you want to become an expert in these areas, you should have a low budget. Unfortunately, Photoshop is not a cheap software. It costs a lot of money. If you have a high budget, then you can go for some other alternatives. Read more about Photoshop and its key features in this post. Photoshop Elements Photoshop Elements is part of a smaller Adobe suite. Photoshop Elements is more affordable than other Adobe products and it is available for free. Photoshop Elements has many core features that Photoshop lacks, making it an interesting option for most users. Photoshop Elements offers more basic features but is very capable. The most common features used in Photoshop Elements are: Black and white conversion Convert an image from RGB to grayscale Convert an image from grayscale to RGB Cropping images Image size controls Image resolution and quality control Image file formats support Loading photos from the internet Painting, selection and mask creation Rotating and resizing images Text overlays and effects Working with other files (PDF, JPEG, TIFF) Images editing and viewing options Image adjustments Adjust image color and brightness Image sharpening Image cropping Using several adjustment layers Creating special effects Adding borders, shadows and highlights Merging images Image exposure control Gradient tools and filtering effects Background removal Masking images and layers Combining images Adjust image exposure and contrast Curves adjustment and controls Curves adjustment and controls Using the spot healing brush Color Picker Pattern placement Image cropping and resizing 05a79cecff

Image copyright Getty Images Image caption The clip features pop star Annie Lennox on vocals, alongside musicians Yoko Ono, Bea Miller and Bono The Global Citizen Festival in New York has been criticised for its questionable efforts to tackle the climate crisis, as detailed on the Guardian's website. The music event, which raised millions of dollars in donations through its five-day event, featured scores of famous musicians. Annoyingly, it seems none of them seem to know how we get to the point where we are facing a climate crisis. As if to add insult to injury, the advert appears to show how much it costs to travel from Goyang, South Korea to New York by air, where the festival took place. Goyang - a city of about 1.6 million - is 4,000km (2,485 miles) from New York City. "Emissions are destroying the planet," is the text that accompanies the advert, which features pop star Annie Lennox on vocals, alongside musician Yoko Ono, musicians Bea Miller and Bono and actors Forest Whitaker and Kiefer Sutherland. Media playback is unsupported on your device Media caption On Thursday, the charity that put on the event announced funding had been given to the Campaign to Stop Plastic Pollution. The advert prompts viewers to text GOSEANNY at 82828, for the first 10,000 people to do so, 50cents each for the first 20,000, and 1p each for every additional 25,000. All of that would come to about 22p, which seems a tad steep for a holiday to New York. But, annoyingly, for every 100 text messages that are received, one trip is guaranteed. It seems money well spent, though, as a trip from Goyang to New York is much cheaper. The price per person according to the website booking.com, is about $450 (£323) - roughly the same price as a return flight from Goyang to New York, after taxes. All of this begs the question, why aren't any of the artists taking part in the ad aware of how plastic is affecting the climate? Plastic waste kills more than 400,000 marine animals and birds each year, and it will likely be a minimum of 10 years before we can reliably say how many people have been killed by plastic pollution. Why should artists

Q: Printing currency using c++ I am trying to come up with a way to print currency in hexadecimal when given a decimal number. My original goal was to find a way to print currency amounts in hex from a decimal string. I am trying to use the C++ printf() function to accomplish this. I have done some research and found some nice ways of using sprintf() to print currency: This uses the sprintf() function to format currency strings based on the currency code and the number Code: const char *CurrencyFormat = "%08.2f"; char *new_string; sprintf(new_string, CurrencyFormat, 0.17); std::cout int main() { float f = -1.35; char *string = NULL; string = malloc(sizeof(f) * 2); sscanf_s(f, "%f", string, 2); printf("%f ", atof(string)); free(string); return 0; } Output: -1.35 The idea is to buffer the number and then print it in decimal form and then use atoi() to convert back
