4. They're able to help you with your exams

Online classes are a great way to earn a degree on your own time. They are often much more convenient than in-person courses because you can schedule them to suit your lifestyle. This is especially helpful if you have a busy work schedule or family responsibilities.

Another benefit of online learning is that you can interact with people from all over the world. You can learn from professionals who have different backgrounds and perspectives, gaining valuable insights that will help you in your career. You can also meet friends and collaborate with fellow students on your course material.

Many students find it difficult to balance their school work with their other responsibilities, so it's important to be flexible when taking classes. You can carve out an hour every evening or morning to study and complete your assignments.

When taking online exams, be sure to avoid distractions like social media and video games. You should also consider using a lockdown browser, which prevents students from accessing other websites while they're taking an exam (see instructions here).

Some test-taking software even uses special browsers that prohibit students from opening tabs or recording themselves. You should try to test this software or technology with your professor in advance so that you can avoid any issues.

One of the best ways to ensure that your students take their tests honestly is by asking them to sign a pledge. Explain what the pledge entails, and then ask them to agree to it when they take their quizzes or exams.

You can also use a remote proctoring service for your online exams. These services have teams of people who can monitor students and ensure that they're not cheating. It's important to choose a proctoring service that has experience working with online exams, so you can be confident that your students are getting the right grade.
